

GOVERNOR JAMES PREDICTS UPTURN IN PENNA. BUSINESS

Feels Business Cycle is Turning Upward Again and
More Feel Confident

AID TO SOLVE RELIEF

New Relief Appropriation Will Bring to $34,000,000 the Amount Appropriated

By Raymond Wilcoxe
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Feb. 9.—(INS)— Gov. Arthur H. James today expressed confidence Pennsylvania would witness a substantial business improvement during the next two years.

He based his conviction on two things:

First, he felt that the business cycle was turning upward again and was due to reach a peak during the next biennium.

Second, he felt that his campaign for economy in government would encourage business in Pennsylvania and serve to bring new industries into the state.

"We're about due for a business improvement," said the Governor in the midst of a discussion over the relief problem facing the state. "It's been due for six years."

Governor James added that he expected the improvement in business to aid him in solving the relief problem.

The problem of relief held the center of the stage for the Legislature also as it prepared to meet in midnight session tonight, pass an additional $22,000,000 relief appropriation, and then adjourn for two weeks until February 27 to permit the Governor to complete his budget.

The new relief appropriation will bring to $34,000,000 the amount appropriated this session for emergency relief needs, the money being transferred from special state funds.

Another round of debate on relief preceded introduction of the new relief appropriation bill in the Senate following its passage by the House.

Sen. Harry Shapiro, Philadelphia, Democratic floor leader, citing detailed statistics, said that the Governor would have to raise $45,000,000 "over and above income now derived by the State from normal and emergency tax levies."

It would be practically impossible to pare this amount from the State's expenses, said Shapiro. Consequently, he said, there were only two other alternatives: to levy additional taxes or to obtain it from the unemployment compensation fund. This fund, he said, which totaled $25,000,000 last year would rise to $75,000,000 in the next biennium. Shapiro suggested that a Senate bi-partisan committee be appointed to look into the matter and devise a feasible plan to use the unemployment compensation's added funds for reducing the relief burden.

Shapiro estimated that the receipts for the next biennium would total $378,000,000 of which $192,000,000 would be from normal tax income and $186,000,000 from emergency taxes levied by the Emergency Administration.
He estimated total expenditures for the next biennium at $423,000,000 leaving a deficit of $45,000,000.

He divided the expenditures for the 1939-41 biennium as follows: debt service, $15,000,000; legislative, judicial and administrative departments, $36,000,000; state institutions, $30,- 000,000; state subsidies, $99,000,000; relief, $203,000,000; repayment of special funds for relief being transferred during this session, $40,000,000.

Perhaps $6,000,000 could be lopped off the subsidies to hospitals, schools and colleges and a few millions here and there from the administrative departments, said Shapiro, but most of the State's expenditures were fixed and subject to little change.

Preceding the Senate relief debate, Secretary of Public Assistance Howard L. Russell met with members of the Senate Appropriations Committee and discussed the relief problem with them. Russell made no estimate, said Shapiro, of the amount he thought would be necessary for relief for the next biennium.

Pertinent Discussion Is Conducted By Co. Realtors

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 9.—Following their custom of the past few months of conducting discussions relative to real estate and real estate practice in general, 18 members of the Bucks County Real Estate Board, in session
last evening took up a pertinent topic.

With the taxation committee in charge, Otto Grupp, chairman, "The Future Sales of Property Purchased by the County Commissioners" was the assigned subject. Many points on this matter were brought out by the members who plan to communicate with the commissioners to learn what plans, if any, have been made, regarding sale of property purchased during tax sales.

Question of why the realtors are required to pay a mercantile tax when they are licensed by the state, was also brought up before the meeting.

The members also considered duplication of signs on properties, uniform forms and practices throughout the county; question of liability of the owner when a contractor executing the work does not carry liability insurance.

Jesse C. Everitt, Hulmeville, vice-president of the board, presided at the meeting which was held in the Doylees-town Inn.

The alleged bandit, Jack Howard, alias Brennan and Batten, who was shot and killed in Philadelphia, by detectives of that city on Monday, was wanted in Bucks county.

Howard was suspected of being the bandit who shot and fatally injured Edward A. Tamkin, 25, of 500 E. Wyoming avenue, a teacher in the Vaux Junior High School, Philadelphia, on September 12 last. Tamkin was shot three times when he resisted a holdup attempt on Bingham street opposite Tacony Creek Park. He died two days later, after giving police a description of his assailant which, detectives said, tallied closely with that of Howard.

Howard also was suspected of being the man who shot and seriously injured Detective Christian Henningson in 1933. He was wanted by Doylees-town authorities for three auto robberies, by the State Motor Police for an $805 larceny, and also was wanted in New York City for the shooting of a policeman.

He was placed on five-year probation in January, 1932, after pleading guilty to aggravated assault and battery by motorcycle and failing to halt and render assistance.

A mortgage which represented a

during the past week, when members of that lodge gathered in the home.

Two hundred assembled to witness the ceremony, the mortgage being burned on a silver platter in the midst of a committee of five officials.

Irvin Hartman, trustee of the lodge, applied the match. Others in the burning ceremony were Albert H. Ladner, Jr., past supreme dictator of the Philadelphia Moose; John H. Nase, chairman of the committee that arranged the program; Warren S. Sollers, Sellersville lodge dictator, and Oliver Twist, vice-dictator of the Philadelphia Lodge of Moose.

The receipts included a balance on hand at the beginning of 1938 of $1,531.14. The larger totals in the year's receipts list taxes collected for 1938, $2,027.99; taxes for 1937, $523.20; taxes for 1936, $201.28; taxes for 1935, $115.58; liquor license, $250.

The main items on the list of expenditures for the 12 month period include: Office materials and supplies, $108.38; contributions to volunteer fire company, $219; street lighting, $791; state workmen's insurance fund, $284.93; with $1,274.95 in the sinking fund.

The sinking fund receipts included a balance as of January 1, 1938,
$1,983.73; four mills on tax collected,
$1,274.95, making a total of receipts,
$3,258.68. The sinking fund account expenditures total $1,068.16, leaving a balance at the end of the year of $2,190.52.

The accounts were audited and found correct by the following: Mrs.
Walter Hanns, Miss Erda M. Schatt,
and Mrs. Walter Jackson.

Storms Sweep West

Bitter cold, blizzards and rain squalls swept portions of the United States today.

Four persons were reported killed when a snow slide smashed the frame house in Bingham Canyon, Utah, occupied by Mrs. Stana Thomas and her five children. Mrs. Thomas and two of her children were among those feared killed when the avalanche struck two houses.

The worst blizzard in recent years
swept Utah and buried highways, roads and railroad tracks under more than a foot of snow.

The Sanpete flier, western passenger train, was reported derailed and marooned in the deep snow near Tephi, Utah.

A bitter cold wave, moving eastward from the Rocky Mountains, preceded the snow storm. Chill weather extended far into the south, accompanied by rain squalls.

Gales Whip Up Sea

New York, Feb. 9.—Northwest gales whipped up mountainous seas in the Atlantic today, leaving one ship, the British freighter Maria de Larraniga, unheard from after flashing an S. O.
S. call, and a second ship, the steamer Gluckauf, in distress off the English coast.

As two rescue ships, the Scamail and the Veendam, reached the last reported position of the Maria de Lar-raniga, about 1200 miles east of New York, Radio Marine Corporation at Chatham, Mass., reported an S. O. S. from the Gluckauf, seven miles from Humber Lightship. Neither the Scamail nor Veendam reported any immediate trace of the Maria de Lar-raniga, with its crew of 37, but began searching in the heavy seas.

Tension rose that the leaking freighter, its No. 1 hatch stove in, might have gone to the bottom after its crew took to life boats in the heavy seas.

PROCLAMATION

The annual solicitation for funds for the Salvation Army will be conducted in Bristol tomorrow and I urge all of our citizens to give to this campaign their most generous support both financially and morally.

The work of that splendid organization known as the Salvation Army does not need to be reviewed here. The name Salvation Army and its work among the unfortunate, both in times of peace and in war, is synonymous with charity dispensed impartially and as unstintingly as is consistent with the means and experience of this well-known agency.

Not only does the Salvation Army feed the hungry and cloth the naked but it gives invaluable assistance to those who are broken spiritually or morally, regardless of race, sex, creed or color.

I would urge our citizens to be as generous as their resources will permit and trust that each individual in this community will be represented in the list of contributors.

CLIFFORD L. ANDERSON,
Burgess.

WHAT A SPECTACLE!

The spectacle of President Roosevelt attempting to climb up the slippery sides of the hole which he himself dug and then voluntarily jumped into, is one that, it is safe to say, not even his most consistent critics had ever hoped to see.

It is a spectacle that adds nothing to the dignity of the office of President.

Such antics, when engaged in by the responsible head of a great democratic nation, gives impetus to the favorite chant of the elements that democratic governments have within them the seeds of their own destruction. This latter charge is of course pure fallacy when applied to the present situation of the President of the United States. The dilemma in which he now finds himself is due to his dictatorial urge for power, his zest for one-man government, not to defects in democratic government.

Having had one striking and costly sample of the sheer futility of idealistic interference with the affairs of Europe, this country should be extremely slow again to become involved in advance of developments bearing directly upon American interests. With all the justifiable resentment against ruthless dictatorial tactics abroad, the general situation contains too many conflicting factors to warrant the premature establishment of out-and-out alliances with any foreign power or group of powers.

The fact that Great Britain and France were the very nations which two decades ago made a colossal farce of an American effort to become the savior of democracy strongly suggests that the part of wisdom under present conditions is for Uncle Sam scrupulously to avoid all European entanglements, mind his own business and stay at home.

An executive who had proper regard for the functions and authority of the co-ordinate branches of government—as provided by the Constitution of the United States—would never have dug such a hole, nor jumped into it.

The ludicrous state in which U. S. foreign policy now finds itself is due to the dictatorial features that have been introduced into the government of the United States by Mr. Roosevelt.

He was going it alone. Digging the hole was his own, solitary, dictatorial idea. Congress was not consulted. If anyone was consulted, it was the Frankfurters and the Ickeses and other hangers-on who were never elected to anything by the people.

Why is it necessary, now, for the President of the United States to declare that he is opposed to foreign alliances?

Why is he suspected of being in favor of foreign alliances, and of leading this nation straight for war?

Because secrecy was attempted in matters more vital than any that have ever faced the American people. Agents of foreign governments were riding around in American army planes in test flights, and every effort was made to keep it secret.

The newspapers brought the facts to light. The newspapers, the only uncensored means of enlightenment left to the people of this nation, since the Washington outfit has successfully throttled all criticism from the radio air waves.

Why, when the newspapers exposed what was going on in secrecy, did the President call in the Senate Foreign Relations committee to disclose the details, but swear every member to strictest secrecy?

Ann Barclay...

Flashes from Florida

By Ann Barclay

St. Petersburg, Florida.

How rapidly this Florida city is growing! Its modern, brisk business section is scattered with beautiful parks that invite you to sit down and rest. Everyone seems to live out-of-doors and well they may in this weather which is a delightful combination of sea and sun. There are endless beaches dotted by thousands of bronzed bathers.

We see that St. Petersburg attracts the young as well as the old. But wait, where are the old people, anyway? As we watch older men and women on the beach, swimming or bowling in the parks, we ask ourselves, "Old age, where is thy sting?" These are men and women enjoying life to the full.

Our American attitude toward age is very strange. We put a premium on youth while other countries bow to age. Perhaps we feel this way because our country is so young in comparison with the age and culture of the Orient, for example. Or suppose we contrast our attitude with that of the French, whose culture is also older than ours. They have long recognized the charm of age, especially the charm of the mature woman, how years make both her mind and her face more interesting.

We Americans may fear age in ourselves, but we admire it in our institutions. We boast about old buildings and businesses. Why can't we see that old age also increases the value of people? Scientists formerly believed that a person's brain gradually deteriorated with age. The more recent view, substantiated by various experiments, is that the mind continues to develop until death, barring actual disease which might induce senility.

For centuries there has been proof that in older men, uninfluenced by emotional reactions, who rely on reason rather than on impulse, we can find the best, detached judgment. From the days of Greece's Council of wise men to the days of our own Supreme Court this fact has been recognized. Who could ever question the mental ability of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes when he retired from the bench at 90? Or who would doubt the intelligent liberality of our own 76 year old Chief Justice Hughes? If we think of such men we'll accept age with honor instead of shame.

Age always means interesting changes. As children we have exciting dreams of being grown-up. As old people we have grown-up dreams called memories. Perhaps what we mean is expressed in our little poem called

WRINKLES

A child said to an aged man, "Why is your face so lined and wrinkled?" The old man turned his head and spoke, And as he did his old eyes twinkled, "Each wrinkle grew from a dream I had

When I was the likes of you. The lines are the roads I had to take To make the dreams come true." The little boy looked surprised at first. And then thoughtful he grew. As he asked, "Kind sir, what should I do, To make my face all wrinkled, too?"

The answer to his question is—merely to live happily and fully. And incidentally, how happily and fully people of any age can enjoy life here in St. Petersburg.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly
(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — The question of "What to wear" rings in the winter air as social activities increase. From our mailbag we extract the question: "Is it too early to wear prints and when does the velvet season end?"

The winter prints always seem to be the loveliest of all and they are the freshest fashions of the moment. Bette Davis has several which she wears under fur coats. A particularly smart one is fashioned with high, gathered bodice and flared skirt. It shows vivid little pineapples against a black background.

The velvet season never ends as long as the weather is cool enough for the fabric. The old idea that velvet was taboo after Christmas has apparently fallen by the wayside.

Another reader asks: "I like to have a small but good wardrobe. Expensive things I buy must last for at least two seasons. How can I ascertain what will be fashionable for more than a season?"

Nobody knows for certain what will be good for twelve months. Nevertheless there are certain classics which have continued in fashion for so long there is no reason why they should not carry on indefinitely. In millinery we have turbans, berets, mannish felts, off-the-face styles, fezes and pill-boxes which enjoy perennial popularity. In dress silhouettes there are the pencil slim, the princess and the pleated skirt styles which carry on from one year to the next. Semi-swing coats will always be good because this is the most successful way of manipulating fur, and cloth coats fall into line. Stripes and plaids go in and out of fashion but monotonies are always good in dull fabrics.

A Washingtonian's problem is: "How can I make a simple black crepe dress look different each time I wear it?"

Trick it out with various sets of "junk" jewelry. Wear one of the new quilted taffeta boleros with it in a plaid or striped pattern. Put a starched white lace collar at the neckline. Add a bright velvet corselet belt—one that laces up the front and has narrow straps over the shoulders. Wear a candlewick hipbone jacket over the dress.

TRIBAL BURIAL

HOOD RIVER, Ore.—(INS)—While

ancient tribal drums beat a primitive tattoo, twenty Indians, remnants of the dwindling Cascade tribe, laid to rest Naomi Jim, 27-year-old Indian belle. Two days and two nights of feasting and rejoicing preceded the burial. The body was swathed in bright cloths and blankets and the tribe squatted around the grave in an almost extinct ritual as they tossed handfuls of earth on the body.

MANHATTAN SIDE-STREETS

By Walter Kierman
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(INS)—The Actors' Equity Association finally has solved the mystery of Abraham Rodriguez, collected $1,000 and marked the case closed but it was a good mystery while it lasted.

It began with a letter from a firm of London solicitors announcing that Abraham Rodriguez had left Equity $1,000 in his will and please send receipt. Equity didn't know Rodriguez and hadn't received the cash so a long correspondence was begun which covered a period of many months.

Finally it brought the cash and the information that Abraham Rodriguez was known professionally as Harry Rogers. All that Equity knows now is that the organization is a thousand dollars richer and that once it had a member named Harry Rogers. Nobody knows why Rogers nee Rodriguez left the cash to the association for he had been out of it and out of the country for close to 20 years.

They say that bread cast upon the waters returns and perhaps at some time during his membership, Equity tossed a slice in the direction of Rodriguez which everyone—except the recipient—afterward forgot.

Actors are like elephants when it comes to having long memories. Ten years after they play a house they can tell you just where the draft from the cracked window in the dressing room hit them in the neck.

My Uncle Jake has a memory like that. If my Uncle Jake borrowed a dollar from you he would never forget like Uncle Jake's head.

it. Twenty years afterward he would cross the street to avoid meeting you.

The only thing actors don't remember is names. They don't remember Harry Rogers, for instance. They don't even seem to remember Mitzi Mayfair who was dancing around here only a year ago. Equity is holding a letter for Mitzi Mayfair now, having forgotten already that Mitzi became Mrs. Albert Hoffman of the beverage company Hoffmanns last March after an off-again-on-again romance that held the front pages for weeks.

That's the way it goes—today's front page sensation is tomorrow's housewife wondering what to have for dinner instead of what costume to wear for the photographers.

In addition to long memories, performers are noted for their superstitions. Some of the superstitions are part of the craft, others are individual. Ella Fitzgerald won't touch a microphone unless she is wearing gloves (she's more afraid of microbes than microphones), the daddy of the Andrews Sisters has to sit in the front row when they broadcast because he was sitting in the front row when they first aired "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen" which brought them fame. Rose Marie, who used to be Baby Rose Marie, wears the same bracelet at every broadcast because she wore it first when she scored a hit at the age of five.

Fred Astaire and Ed Wynn each have an old pair of shoes they treasure and Bing Crosby hangs onto an old sweatshirt by way of a lucky charm.

They are almost as superstitious as my Aunt Myrilla who is always rapping my Uncle Jake on the head. Myrilla says that as a substitute for pure mahogany there is nothing quite like Uncle Jake's head.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL
Copyright, 1939
King Features Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD.—LIGHTS! CAMERA! ACTION!

Wide-eyed and sleepless, Vivien Leigh goes before the cameras in the big adventure, the role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind."

Since 6:30 in the morning the 40-acre lot back of the Selznick studios has been a hive of activity. Lights, reflectors and a tangle of electric cables surround the white brick front of a southern mansion, a replica of the O'Hara plantation as described by Margaret Mitchell in her novel.

The camera is focused on the veranda, Director George Cukor is prepared to shoot a scene that has been lifted almost verbatim from the first chapter of the book.

It is where Scarlett upbraids the Tarleton twins for talking about war and where they tell her that Ashley Wilkes is engaged to Melanie Hamilton.

Miss Leigh wears a gown that has been specially designed for the color cameras. It is of white or-gandie with a green print in it. There are green bows at the shoulders, at the bosom and in the star's hair.

The Carleton twins are wearing blue riding coats, in sharp contrast to their fiery red hair.

The Selznick casting offices canvassed far and wide to find a pair of real twins to play these brothers. They failed but the two actors chosen for the parts will serve one important purpose.

They will supply a pair of real southerners for the cast of "Gone With the Wind."

Unrelated in real life, they are Fred Crane and George Bessolo. Crane is a New Orleans boy who went to Tulane university. Bessolo is a native of Ashland, Ky.

It is the first film role for both of them, so they are even more nervous than Vivien Leigh.

There is a sort of perversity about the way things happen in the first shots of big pictures. "Gone With the Wind" runs true to form. After several faulty takes, the scene is coming out to Cukor's satisfaction. Suddenly, there is a steady drone from the skies. An airplane is passing over the set. Shading their eyes, the company looks up. It is a government bomber.

"Damned Yankees," somebody exclaims, and the tension is broken. After so many months, "Gone With the Wind" is finally under way.

Lightest-hearted set in Hollywood is "Lucky Night," where Myrna Loy and Robert Taylor are making their first screen appearance together.

This is another comedy about a rich girl and a poor boy and the script is so lively that the stars and Director Norman Taurog are having a picnic.

Nobody stands on ceremony. When we are visiting the set Myrna Loy is a little slow in getting into a scene.

Assistant Director Red Golden calls in a loud voice: "Hurry up, Miss Loy. Remember, it still isn't too late to get somebody else to play your part."

Sometimes you run into strange experiences on movie sets. We go out to see Loretta Young shoot a scene from "Alexander Graham Bell" and find the company marking time while Director Irving Cummings sets up cameras for a new scene.

Loretta calls to come into her dressing room. It's filled to overflowing. Besides Loretta, there are Sally Blane, Polly Ann Young and three young men. One of the young men is displaying the contents of a jewel case. It contains an assortment of rings, bracelets and clips. You can take your pick of diamonds, rubies, emeralds or sapphires. The girls are trying on the jewels and comparing their merits.

We asked the salesman how much for the whole case.

"You can have it for $300,000," he says with a smile.

And he's not kidding. The jewels he is carelessly passing around the dressing room are worth that much.

BRISTOL

What critics consider the greatest horror story ever written, Robert Louis Stevenson's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," is at Ritz Theatre today in motion picture form, with Fredric March in the title role and Miriam Hopkins, Rose Hobart, Holmes Herbert and Halliwell Hobbes in the chief supporting roles.

For half a century since "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" was first written in 1885, men and women throughout the world have chilled at the horrors created by Stevenson's fertile imagination and portrayed dramatically in his story. Several stage versions have won perennial success, and book-sellers have always found the fiction version a best seller.

March portrays the dual-personality role of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. As Dr. Jekyll, he discovers a compound which can convert him into another individual—the brutish, fiendish Mr. Hyde who exults in torturing others and bringing terror to everyone within his reach.

Dr. Jekyll's original idea is that he can be Mr. Hyde whenever he wishes, and return to his own personality whenever he wishes—but it is when he discovers that Mr. Hyde is the controlling influence and that Dr. Jekyll is slowly being eradicated that the story reaches its amazing climax.

Miss Hopkins appears as the Cockney street girl who is one of Mr. Hyde's victims. Miss Hobart is cast as Dr. Jekyll's fiancée, Rouben Mamoulian directed.

RITZ THEATRE, CROYDON

The "Goofus" was officially introduced to Hollywood recently with George Folsey, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cameraman on "The Shining Hour," making the introduction.

Regardless of the mental pictures conjured up by the name "Goofus," this particular species is a new form of light designed especially for the spectacular dance number done by Joan Crawford and Tony DeMarco in early sequences of the picture which is now playing at the Ritz Theatre.

If you're in the mood for an evening of uproar screwball comedy, "Up the River," the new 20th Century-Fox picture which opened yesterday at the Ritz Theatre, is just about the funniest combination of music, broad comic situations and razzle-dazzle football in many a season. The story focuses on a group of
